

PATIENTS WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU

This document provides guidance for you and your staff to have conversations with patients about the PATHFINDER studies and paltusotine, an investigational drug being studied for the treatment of acromegaly.

Please note that the intake center is prepared to answer all patient questions about the trial. Our intake center is staffed with a Patient Communications Team who are GCP-certified and specifically trained to answer questions and prescreen patients for the PATHFINDER studies. Also, please remind patients that calling the intake center and speaking to someone does not obligate them to join the study.

- 1 Introduce yourself
- 2 Reason for calling: To tell you about two clinical trials for a potential new acromegaly treatment that might interest you.
OR
To follow up on the email/letter I sent about clinical trials for a potential new acromegaly treatment.
- 3 Introduce the studies: The studies are called PATHFINDER, and they are evaluating the safety and efficacy of an investigational, once-daily, oral acromegaly treatment called paltusotine to see if it can control elevated IGF-1 and GH hormone levels, and to see if it has an effect on acromegaly symptoms. If this drug is approved, it would be a new treatment option.
- 4 Determine interest: Is participating in this trial something you might be interested in?
- 5 How to learn more: I encourage you to call the intake center. They can tell you about the studies and answer your questions.
- 6 Additional information: If no letter or email was sent ahead: Can I send you some information?
  - Or, The email I sent you has links to more information.
  - Or, The letter I sent you has web addresses to resources where you can get more information.
- 7 Refer to intake center: I'm happy to give you the intake center phone number now, if you would like. That number is 844-479-0315.
- 8 Conclude call: Is there anything else I can answer, or do you have questions for the doctor?
